WEDNESDAY, MAY 1

New York's celebration of the Centennial of Washington's inauguration will be a very memorable event. If George Washington could have witnessed it he would have indeed been happy over being the father of his country.

Captain Merrill, who has been honored with honors at Philadelphia and Baltimore, will soon be forgotten by the general public, but as long as legends pass down from father to son, in the families of those whom he saved from a watery grave he will live as a hero indeed.

An ingenious Eastern man has asked for permission from the New York General Assembly to experiment with a contrivance for harnessing Niagara Falls. A bill looking to this object has passed one branch, and doubtless will receive sanction from the other. "Business before beauty" will probably be Niagara's motto in the near future.

The Cleveland Press is led to remark that the old cry: "Westward, ho!" died at Oklahoma. Here and there Uncle Sam may have some patches of ground that will some day be reclaimed for; but Oklahoma was not a land for free land for free man is about done for. The westward stream of humanity has struck the barrier of the Rocky mountains. There must be a return stream for every tide has its ebb. Oklahoma phenomenon should mean that the neglected lands to the east will ultimately become more valuable.

True Unclepater's Troubles.
True Unclepater is said to have returned again to this city, although we have not seen him, but we learn from a trustworthy source that such is the case, and he is remaining indoors until a little domestic affair, which the Cincinnati Enquirer made public today, has been blown over.

It will be remembered that True was united in marriage some time ago to a beautiful little lady of sixteen years of age. Shortly after he removed with his child wife to Van Wert, Ohio, where he has been employed in a meat market, and nothing has been known concerning him until today, when it was learned, through the Enquirer, that all was not well in his household. It appears that everything ran smoothly until a few weeks ago, when a man named Jack C. Harris, of Caldwell, Noble county, Ohio, who was exposed by the Enquirer for work of the same kind at Cambridge, put in appearance at Van Wert, soliciting orders for photographs, and made the acquaintance of Mrs. Unclepater. Since that time she has been greatly enamored with him. Last week, one day, True followed the guilty pair, when they were going about together, and took his wife home. Monday evening, while True was at the meat market Harris paid a visit to the house. A neighbor, who was employed to watch, sent a little girl to the market. The news soon spread, Unclepater went down street on a run, revolver in hand, but Harris also had a watch on him, and he followed him. True followed and Harris kept out of the reach of the weapon, and escaped and has not since been heard from.

DR. THOMAS ADDRESS

An outline of his interesting address, given at the Union Continental Hotel, Tuesday.

The outline of thought in Dr. Thomas' highly interesting address, Tuesday, was as follows:

After referring to the brief time allotted him in which to give the history of years, he said he would endeavor to trace some of the causes that made the 20th day of April, 1776, a memorable one, and try to present a few reasons why we should celebrate its centennial anniversary. To understand the significance of the day we must necessarily take a view of the circumstances preceding it, and note some of the formative events of our government. To accomplish this he chose for the outline of thought the three great state papers which are said to form the basis of our country's history, viz:

The original petition to the King by the Continental Congress in September, 1774; the Declaration of Independence July 4th, 1776; and the constitution adopted in 1789. He referred briefly to the causes that led the colonies to petition the King for a redress of grievances, the rejection of which aroused a spirit of defiance which culminated in 1776 in the revolutionary war.

The second state paper was that taken up and a short account of the preparation, reception and effect of this great document given. The principles embodied in it, that all men are created equal; that human governments are instituted for the sole purpose of securing the welfare of the people; that the people have a natural right to alter their government, whenever it becomes destructive of liberty; that the King's tyrannical tyranny over his American subjects was no longer endurable, and that, therefore, the United States of America are, and of a right ought to be free and independent states, were clearly brought out.

After the war the condition of the colonies under the articles of confederation was deplorable, and the Continental Congress, which had been called into existence because of the imminent peril of the country, found itself unable to hold the reins of government, as it had nothing but delegated powers, and the consent of the states was necessary to complete an act of legislation. The sagacious patriots saw that unless the articles of confederation could be replaced with a better system the nation would go to ruins. This led, at the suggestion of Washington, to a determination to remodel the government. In 1787, the committee appointed for this purpose made their report, which report became the constitution of the United States, written to a large extent by Robert Morris, governor of Pennsylvania. On the question of adopting the constitution the people were divided. It was the first great political institution in the country. Mention was made of the important part Alexander Hamilton took in the controversy in which he proved himself to be, perhaps, the greatest of all exponents of constitutional liberty in America, and to whom the republic owes a debt of perpetual gratitude.

By the close of the year 1788 all the states, except Rhode Island and North Carolina, had ratified the constitution. The new congress, which was to have met on March 4th, 1789, was delayed by the slow arrival of the members until April 30th, when they assembled and cast a unanimous ballot for George Washington for president, with a majority for John Adams for vice president.

The feeling with which Washington received the news of his election and the joy with which he welcomed him all along the way from Mt. Vernon to New York, was alluded to. It was a time of great joy, and now at the end of the century it is appropriate that we should rejoice as we review the past.

A vivid description was given of the intense excitement at New York when Washington approached the city in the harbor surrounded by the best naval display the age could command, and an account of the ceremonies of inauguration of the first president, the impressive oath administered by Chancellor Livingston of New York, the tumultuous clamor of bells, cannon and deafening cheering as the act was completed, that put the breath of life into the greatest nation ever devised by man.

The thought was fittingly brought out that in spite of most singular errors, on the part of the people, the birth of the republic was without violence or bloodshed. The emergency was so serious that the wisest of us said that if the constitution had been rejected, national unity would have been established by armed force. And, as the first inauguration showed that the American people had yielded wisely and peacefully to the demands of their national position, every historical student must see how appropriate it was that Washington, whose existence, character and influence had made that peaceful revolution possible, should have been the one chosen to guide the new ship of state. Truly, it has been said, that history has no scales on which to weigh the incomparable political advantage of the American people in having such a character among them at such a time.

"The remarkable ceremonies taking place in New York at this time have the greatest value for us, as a people. The entire press will unite in sending these reminiscences of history all over our land, and will attract attention throughout the world. A republican form of government is now at the eye of the century, and has proven to be safe and strong, and it is settled that it can endure in the hands of an educated people. Thus, with the life of Washington, is the object lesson before us, and we should all study well the meaning of this national celebration."

The address closed with the following tribute to Washington:

"To lead a people in revolution wisely and successfully, without ambition and without a crime, demands, indeed, lofty genius and unending virtue. But to build their state—and the angry conduct of passion and prejudice and unreasoned apprehension, the inequality of many, and the grave doubts of all, to organize for them and peacefully govern them—is the greatest service that a man can render to mankind. This also is the glory of Washington. His countrymen are charged with fond idolatry of his memory, and his great name is pleasantly depreciated as a myth or exaggeration. But no church ever canonized a saint more worthily than he is canonized by the national affection, and to no man in our history, benefactor, or lawgiver, we owe more honors ever so justly deserved as to Washington, the hero of the world."

logue exaggeration. But no church ever canonized a saint more worthily than he is canonized by the national affection, and to no man in our history, benefactor, or lawgiver, we owe more honors ever so justly deserved as to Washington, the hero of the world."

The Sternberg Keating.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our citizens to the fact that the great artist, Sternberg Keating, will be in Marion, Ohio, tomorrow (Thursday) evening, at Music Hall, by one of America's great pianists, Constantine Sternberg.

Mr. Winick, under whose management the concert is given, intends to make it one of the most enjoyable ever given in our city.

A true program has been arranged, embracing some of the choicest works from eminent classical authors, which must be characterized as extraordinary, having never been heard in this place before. The playing of the great artist Sternberg the past few years, both in Europe and America, has been marked with great success, having received the highest praise from musical critics for his rare gifts and acquirements. A large space in this paper might be filled with press commendations, but one will be sufficient to show his musical standing at his home in the beautiful city of Atlanta, Ga.

In the review of a concert given in that city, the Atlanta Constitution said: "It is very unusual for us during Lent to be able to chronicle so brilliant a gathering of Atlanta society as that which occurred last night at Mr. Sternberg's concert. Every available seat was occupied and the gallery had to be opened. Space does not allow us to say all that could be said about such an artist as Mr. Sternberg. In point of technique and control of the instrument, Mr. Sternberg has risen to the highest rank among living pianists. Soft as velvet and smooth as ivory is his touch, and how remarkable did he subordinate all technical display to the interpretation of the composer's thoughts and emotions. As he employs his skill, marvelous as it is, it becomes completely subservient to the sensitive part of his playing—it only adds another charm to its beauty. He received what he merited, the warmest possible tribute—a storm of applause and the complete sympathetic interest of his audience."

Tickets with reserved seats are on sale at Tristram & Young's, price 50 cents to any part of the house. Every seat at Music Hall should be filled on this occasion.

The Grocers' Beaten.

An exciting game of base ball between the grocers and expression took place on Tuesday afternoon on the Prentiss grounds, quite a crowd of spectators congregated, among whom were prominent merchants, lawyers and doctors, who occupied reserved seats on the back benches. Sam Oppenheimer umpired the game, and did so well that appreciation was visible on the countenances of all but H. C. Huberman and Plump Reed, who wandered off in one corner of the field and played "one out cat." By the way, the expression that hovered about Sam Oppenheimer's face would indicate that he had bet on the right side.

Although the grocers did admirably they were easily downed by the expression men, who are all good players. John Dill won much admiration by his grand hitting and the easy manner in which he beat his base—on base; Charles Cresswell did very poor work at the bat, but his redeeming feature was his feet running, by which means he could easily reach first base without exerting himself by striking the ball; Charles Wilson displayed great merit as a ball player by falling down every time the ball came near him, Kling, May, Bean and Robinson all did nicely, and Frank Padlock, as catcher, and Fred Stangle, as pitcher, both showed considerable skill at their positions. Among the grocers, Harry Setburner received credit as the best pitcher; C. W. Conway has a smooth way of sliding in and gaining his base regardless of the baseman; an attractive batter; Jack Thew and A. C. Court made magnificent basemen; Holbe Stangle and Will Stull won laurels as fielders; Lew Allen, although somewhat light for the position, showed considerable nerve in catching the "shot balls" from the bat, and Frank Foreman, as pitcher, was well adapted to the place.

The score is as follows: The expression men batted 25 times, of which Fred Stangle batted 5, Charles Wilson 2, Clint Kling 3, Charles Cresswell 7, Fred Bean 5 and Frank Robinson 7. The grocers batted 25 times, of which Lew Allen batted 1, Frank Foreman 1, Jack Thew 2, George Foreman 5, Harry Setburner 3, C. W. Conway 5, A. C. Court 1, Holbe Stangle and Will Stull 0.

A Railroad Reception.
Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hane were "at home" to about one hundred and twenty-five of their friends Tuesday night, and their elegant home was the scene of an assembly of Marion's young people that is rarely equalled, and never excelled, in brilliancy. The reception was given in half of Miss Hane and in honor of Miss Mayser, of Prentiss, Ill., and Miss Newton, of Sidney, O.

The reception began at 8 o'clock and for nearly two hours Mr. and Mrs. Hane and the accomplished young ladies were engaged in extending cordial greetings and the welcome of their home to their many guests. The dinner assembly was distinguished for its brilliancy and with charming music the guests abated themselves to the enjoyment of sociality. The invitations were confined to young people, and the brightness of youth, the elegant costumes and charming repartee made a very brilliant scene.

The refreshments were elegantly served and proved a happy means of transition from social intercourse to the happy hours of dancing.

OBITUARY

FARLEY Dennis Farley was born in Marion county, Ohio, on February 13th, 1854, and died April 25th, 1892, aged 38 years, 2 months and 11 days.

He was married to Alice Miller on November 24th, 1884, who is now left to mourn his death. He was taken suddenly and severely sick with lung fever on February 20th and, though suffering much, he bore it patiently and without a murmur, and by his death was made manifest of that death he left all his home and claims for his own all right. Looking at it from a human standpoint alone, it might seem that one just in the prime of life, and so kind and affectionate to his wife and friends, should have been spared to them a little longer, but after all that medical skill and human aid could do, he was called to that quiet and better land, where the weary all find rest.

Though not a professed Christian when in health, he was a sincere attendant at the house of God and gave cheerfully to support the ministry. While languishing upon his bed he told his wife that he would be willing to die if it were not for leaving her behind, and very often when too weak to converse took her hand and gently pressing it would murmur God's name, as if in prayer.

There is a brighter world than this. Beyond the veil lies life. When death comes shall we not be able to say: "I have known him, and he is now in the better land." When like a spirit he has left this world, we shall be able to say: "He is now in the better land." The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Scott, of Agona, O., whose text was 1 Cor. 15: 25, "O Grave Where is Thy Victory?" after which his remains were placed in the Scott Town cemetery, to which place he was followed by a very large attendance of relatives and friends.

A FUNERAL.

Capture and Recapture.
A veteran of the Thirty-sixth Illinois volunteers furnishes this:

After we had flanked Johnston's army from Dallas, it was, contrary to the usual custom, the fortune of the First brigade—Sheridan's old division—to be left behind the army a few days, as a guard for an ambulance train. One day two of our men—one of them Jack Tyrrell, commissary of the brigade—went to take a bath beyond and in sight of our picket line, in a small bayon, which temerity was observed by some of Ferguson's cavalry hovering in the vicinity, who detached two men armed with sabers and cutlasses to bring them in. Being without arms they were surprised, and started off on a dashable, in the very face of the pickets, who dared not fire for fear of injuring the prisoners. Each rebel started in a different direction with his charge. After going a short distance Tyrrell dodged to one side, exposing his captor to our pickets, who gave him a volley, but missed, on which the Johnny, out of spite, returned the shot, when Tyrrell, taking advantage of his empty carbine, sprang and caught him by his abundant whiskers and dragged him from his horse. Here a short struggle ensued, in which the Confederate had to give way to northern muscle, although they were both good types of their countries, and Johnny, minus his gun and saber, was marched to the picket lines by his escort, who guided him by walking behind him with one hand in each side of his whiskers. It is useless to say that he was received by the pickets with considerable merriment. The other Confederate, on seeing his comrade's fate, and hearing the whir of a few random shots, fled, and left his charge to come back at his will.

Do Liquors Produce Fat?

Liquids make fat. There is no doubt of this in my mind, though I am fully cognizant of the fact that a good many people will deny it. The character of the liquids has a good deal to do with it, but the practice of drinking invariably leads to unwieldy bulk. In Spain, where men drink little, a fat man is unknown. In Paris, where men content themselves with sipping thimbleful of absinthe or small cups of black coffee, the French are thin to a remarkable degree. The women, on the other hand, drink great quantities of champagne, Burgundy and lately beer, and they are as a result portly to stoutness. In England men drink ale and beer, and they are a thick necked, pudgy and heavy race as a rule. I had observed all this many times, and when I went to Germany, where I knew the consumption of beer was very great, I had prepared to find fat men in abundance. I was not disappointed. There would seem to be absolutely no end of big, corpulent and unwieldy men in Germany. While in the army they are slim and splendid looking warriors, but two months after they leave the ranks they become heavy, portly and beefy to the last degree. This is even so in the ranks among the other soldiers, and the cavalry were men of such extraordinary weight that they always excited comment from strangers.—Philadelphia Times.

The Haytians.

In Hayti the people are divided into three classes—the blacks, the coloreds and the whites. The blacks are, of course, the most numerous, and they are also the most ignorant. The coloreds are those who have mixed blood in them and form the intelligent portion of the inhabitants. They are largely in the minority, but they are the only class competent to conduct the government. The whites are those whose men who go down there as merchants. Many of these marry the colored girls, and then, of course, become more thoroughly identified with the best interests of the government. The people generally, particularly the colored portion, have a curious mixture of traits. The negroes as a race are impulsive and excitable. They have these qualities, and in addition the mercurial temperament of the French, for nearly all are sent to Paris to complete their education. This combination makes them difficult to govern, for there is a natural jealousy between the blacks and the colored, and so affairs are generally more or less unsettled.—Washington Star.

A Little Row Land.

Old Lady—Have determined to have my fortune told to the man who saved my life when I was a little girl.

Lawyer—Noble woman! All the world will ring with your praises. Who is the man?

"Ah, yes, I remember him. He starved to death forty years ago."—New York Weekly.

Guard Against the Strike.

And always have a bottle of Acker's English Remedy in the house. You cannot tell how soon Cramp may strike your little one, or a cold or rough may fasten itself upon you. One dose is a preventive and a new dose a positive cure. All Throat and Lung troubles yield to its treatment. And the remedy guaranteed by H. C. Huberman & Co.

Hannah Batters.—The old-fashioned fat woman, died at Frankfort, a suburb of Philadelphia, last week, after a lingering illness of erysipelas. She weighed nearly seven hundred pounds at the time of her death. After death, by the undertaker's measurement, her body was six feet and three inches long, two feet and ten inches across, and twenty inches through. The casket in which she was buried was six feet long, three feet wide and two feet deep. Her husband, John Batters, who survives her, is the living skeleton, and when traveling in that capacity weighed but forty-five pounds. She leaves one daughter, who is the wife of Charles Heckel, and who is only of ordinary size. The woman died with a great deal of money.

BREVINT, N. Y., April 27.—The Canadian park commissioners, under tender to great horse race falls at Niagara has reached an understanding with the objective point, but it is unsatisfactory and the tunnel will be projected forty feet further in a different direction to a point where a volume of water twelve feet thick breaks over the cataract. The tunnel is eight feet high, six feet wide, and when finished will be 800 feet long. The work so far has been in slate rock, but there is about this a heavy mass of Queenston gray rock.

—A beautiful day was observed by most of the business men of the city by their stores being closed, and where it was impossible for a merchant to lose his store he contented himself by fastidiously and artistically decorated and in other ways observed the holiday.

—But the court house officials had apparently forgotten that the appearance of such a fine edifice as the court house, which is Marion county's pride, could be improved by appropriate decorations. Not even a pump flag was to be seen floating in the breeze from the court house.

—The friends of Mrs. Rev. David Rutledge, wife of the presiding elder of the Delaware circuit, of the M. E. church, will be sorry to learn of her very dangerous condition, the result of injuries received in a runaway accident while driving along the pike between Delaware and Marysville, Tuesday morning. Rev. Rutledge had hired a livery rig and, accompanied by his wife, was driving along the pike when his horse took fright and ran away. The livery was overturned and both occupants caught in the top and dragged for the distance of a quarter of a mile before being rescued. The horse continued its flight a mile further and completely demolished the buggy. As quickly as possible Mrs. Rutledge was removed to the home of Arthur Robinson, where, and everything possible was done for her, but her back is so badly injured that her condition is critical. Her husband miraculously escaped any serious injuries.

NOTICE EXTRAORDINARY

In order to move the "Purvey stock" rapidly we will establish "Special Sale" days, as follows:

Thursday, May 24, "Clock Day."

Friday, May 25, "Gold Ring Day."

Saturday, May 26, "Silverware Day."

Sunday, May 27, "Silver Watch Day."

Tuesday, May 28, "Gold Pens, Gold Pencils, Gold Tooth Picks, etc., Day."

On those days will give a special discount of 10 per cent. from present prices.

If you stop and think a moment that we are now selling these goods at prices never heard of in our city, you certainly will take advantage of the "Special Sale" days. For example, we are selling an "eight-day" clock for $3, regular price $5, on clock day the price will be $2.70.

When in our store look at the 47 cent an hundred shirts—the best value ever offered in this market, price our hats, underwear, shawls, socks, Coon & Co's collars and cuffs and everything in the goods furnishing department.

We are now prepared to make you a elegant suit of clothes from $75 to $100 less than former prices. Look at our $5 pants.

Remember the "Special Sale" days, and our place of business—two doors west of the postoffice, Clement Bros. old room.

We mean business. J. O. P. 1111 B.

Normal Notes

Prof. Buckle is now at work at the Normal. He will have charge of the music department. He is a graduate of the Boston Conservatory in piano, voice culture and piano tuning. The people of Marion need not send away for a piano tuner here.

Our national holiday was appropriately observed at our address by Prof. Yale after which the school sang "America." The work proceeded then as usual.

Preparations are being made for commencement, which promises to be very interesting. The program will be completed before long, when it will be published.

Mr. Mann is training his new lousie which will be completed this summer.

The strip of land east of the Normal has been laid out in lots. They are large and will make fine residence lots.

Mr. Strode says "the best girl" he went to see at Gayport was his mother.

St. Paul's Church.

Divine services at St. Paul's church this evening, at 7:30.

The former members of the Chancel Chapter will meet in the vestry at 7 o'clock sharp.

The officers and teachers and friends of the Sunday school are desired to remain for conference after the service this evening.

The Sunday school lesson for next Sunday will be discussed upon

Crushed Stone Cheap.

The undersigned will sell, until further notice, the best quality of crushed stone that has ever been used in Marion, for 10 cents per yard, at crusher, and for 10 cents per yard delivered any place in the city of Marion. If you who buy for the corporation want crushed stone in large quantities cheaper than those figures, advise for bids.

DANIEL LAWRENCE.

A man giving his name as John's driver came to town Tuesday to celebrate and indulge in a plain drunk, for which he spent the night in the city prison, and was taken before Mayor Gailey this morning and fined one dollar and costs.
